Piratic Tribute

From 1700 to 1801, the United States government paid $50,000 a year in tribute to pirates.

Dear Miss Dix, I have a number of friends and acquaintances who are good, kind, well-meaning people and whom I would hate to hurt or offend, yet who are dull, stupid and tiresome. I have tried every way I know to get rid of them, but without avail. Is there any way to escape bores?

A SUFFER
Answer: I am afraid not, because the world is full of them. The only possible way to avoid them would be to live in a hermit cell and then, perhaps, if you had no other companionship but your own society you would find that you were your own worst bore.

Starving For Companionship
Perhaps you have never thought that just listening to a man or woman may be the exercise of civility in its highest form, but such is the case. There are plenty of people who are just as much starving for companionship as they could be for food; who are just as much shivering in the coldness of their isolation as they would be if they were out on a winter's night with no warm clothes to protect them; who would share your dinner with the hungry, you would bestow your coat upon the freezing. Why not supply the needs of these spiritual paupers?

In a way, bores are outcasts. Everyone avoids them as if they had the plague. But if you would measure the bore's sufferings, watch the joy that illuminates his countenance when he finds some philanthropic soul who will listen to him with an appearance of interest while he tells all about the grocery trade and the smart things his little Johnnie said, and boasts of the peculiar excellence of his motorcar.

And old people. Think how they wake up and come back to new life when they find some one who will actually ask them questions about things that happened in their youth. And women—Haven't you seen a forlorn, disgruntled-looking woman simply sit up and beam with unbecoming rapture when given an opportunity to tell all about her minor and major operations?

Surely if we realized that in no other way could we scatter so much sunshine and bring so much happiness to our fellow creatures as by suffering fools gladly, as the Good Book says, we would be more patient with bores.

Dear Miss Dix: Why is the mother always blamed when children have bad manners or go wrong? Why shouldn't the father be included in the censure? Isn't it as much his duty to try to teach the children to be little ladies and gentlemen as the mother's? I think it is very unfair to hold the mother responsible for the way the children turn out.

Dear Miss Dix: A boy and I are very much in love, but he cannot afford to support me now. We have discussed three possibilities: We could go ahead and get married and struggle along. We could get married secretly. Or we could live together without marriage. Which one of these courses should we choose?

TROUBLED
Answer: Take the first. That one leads to happiness and self-respect and all that makes life worth living. The other two roads lead to misery, especially for the woman.

Contest Helps Develop Better Chickens

Fayetteville, March 16. Baby chicks by the thousands—some of them worth their weight in gold—were hatched here early today to start a 12-weeks lease on life.

The chicks, all from prize breeding stock throughout the nation, popped out of their shells in the incubator room of the University of Arkansas agricultural experiment station right on schedule. They will compete in the National Chicken of Tomorrow contest trials.

Shortly after midnight, the hatch began. Once out of their shells, the chicks were turned over to a sexing crew, here from Connecticut to identify each of the "Butter Bells" as a pullet or cockerel chick. Next each chick was wing-branded with an aluminum tag, numbered for lasting identification and record keeping. Finally, all were moved to their living quarters—two now broader houses, each 420 feet long and 24 feet wide, built for the on the University farm.

The chicken-of-tomorrow competition is the climax of earlier state and regional breeding contests, and produces bigger, better meat chickens for the nation's dinner tables. The breed whose entry is judged best in the finals here will receive the award of $5,000 from A and T Stores, sponsor of the test in operation with the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the poultry industry, and the University of Arkansas.

With food prices at peak levels today, millions of American home makers have an eye on these bigger and better birds that will provide more delicious and more economical chicken dinners for the family.

More than 20,000 visitors are expected here for the final week, June 11-16, to witness the racing and take part in a week-long program of entertainment, tours, educational panels related to the poultry industry.

Bosnia, in Yugoslavia, is mountainous and heavily wooded.

ULPC Takes Another Look at Setup

Washington, March 19 — (AP) — The United Labor Policy Committee (ULPC) takes another look today at its terms for returning to active participation in the government's mobilization setup.

The committee made up of 14 of the nation's top labor leaders, meets today against the compromise plan for economic stabilization.

The board has been inoperative for more than a month. The three labor members walked out in protest against a ceiling on wage increases.

They acted at the direction of the ULPC, which includes the CIO and nonoperating railroads.

Strikes have been threatened in meat packing and shipbuilding industries because no agency is authorized to pass on proposed wage increases.

The unions and industry groups agreed to rebuilding the board as an 11 man agency twice its former size — and giving it authority to settle disputes.

But they don't agree on the scope of disputes it should handle. Johnston's compromise would limit the disputes to three general areas: those involving wages for federal employees; those affecting national war effort; and those involving the employer and employee.

Representatives of the National Association of Manufacturers, U.S. Chamber of Commerce and business advisory council said they would not agree to anything but a narrow issue going to the board for settlement.

They argue that the Taft Hartley act provides for processing of the labor through the national labor relations board or special emergency machinery.

The wage stabilization board that is not the only one in which the ULPC is tangled, however, it plans to issue a statement on management, making definite proposals for handling such problems as labor strikes in the defense effort.

Extension of Rent Control Is Likely

Washington, March 19 — (AP) — A bill to extend federal rent controls for many communities neared a final congressional hurdle today.

Administration leaders called on the senate-approved extension bill in the house and pressed for a decision, but the vote may be delayed until tomorrow.

Many Republicans and southern Democrats gave advance indications they will oppose the bill. The real fight, however, was expected later in the session in a complete new rent control law.

The bill brought up today would extend controls for 90 days only in those communities in which controls are due to expire on March 31. These are cities and towns which did not act to keep controls past that date.

Tight Woods, the government's housing expediter, said about 1,000 communities have voted to keep controls after March 31. But about 1,300 others failed to act. Controls in those communities will expire at the end of this month unless congress votes the extension.

Only the automatic decontrol feature of existing law would be removed by the pending bill. Communities still could elect to decontrol themselves.

Cities in which rent controls are due to expire at the end of this month unless the extension bill is cleared by congress include Detroit, Minneapolis, Cleveland, Seattle, Kansas City, Memphis, Denver, Louisville, Toledo, Des Moines and Shreveport.

Any extension past June 30 probably will be tied to renewal of the basic economic controls law, also due to expire June 30. It includes the authority to control prices and wages.

Evil Though They Are Wars Stimulate World Progress According to Scientists

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Howard Blakeslee, my erudite colleague who is science editor for the Associated Press, likes to start an argument if he can, which accounts for his pausing at my desk to fling this challenge at me:

"We've been brought up on the thesis that the world is going to the dogs. That isn't true. The world is getting better."

"O.K.," I replied cautiously, "so it's getting better. And just what do you mean by that?"

Blakeslee had his answer ready, and it certainly puts a different complexion on the global picture as generally viewed these days. In substance it is this:

Wars and threats of war, despite their many had effects, do contribute in numerous ways to progress. This is particularly true in the field of science.

Take the development of atomic energy, as a prime example. The wars and threats of wars in the past ten years have put us far ahead of the progress we normally would have achieved in this vital field. A whole new world is being opened up in this branch of science alone, and that is true not only of military developments but of ordinary progress.

The threats of war are giving us better airplanes. We are heading for atomic powered ships. Radio and radar are being improved to meet the emergencies of war.

Mass production has been speeded up in many countries with the accompanying benefits to the average citizen. Metallurgy has boomed.

And look at medicine. War has sped the making and use of penicillin. This has resulted in the saving of millions of lives, not only among the fighting forces but among civilians. And there has been progress in many other medical lines. Doctors, responding to the calls of war and the ills which march with conflict, have had a chance to study rare diseases and evolve treatments. Starvation centers, especially in Asiatic areas, are getting new attention. Peoples who never before have had enough to eat are now being helped by their more fortunate western brothers. And this, of course, is resulting in an improvement in health conditions in the underprivileged areas.

Military training itself has had its benefits, not the least of which is the improvement in the physical condition of the youths of many countries. And the military service is opening up new educational facilities.

Now heaven forbid that these facts should be mistaken as arguments in favor of war. They are cited merely as demonstrating that, evil though they are, wars do stimulate activities which contribute to progress.

Naturally, we would prefer to take our progress without wars. We had rather move more slowly and suffer less anguish.

Not all the material progress imaginable is worth the price of lives of our men spent on the battlefields.

RFC Probe Is Extended Indefinitely

Washington, March 20 — (AP) — Senators whose investigation of influence peddling charges at the reconstruction finance corporation (RFC) has stirred up a political issue drove ahead today — possibly into new fields — under an indefinite extension of their probe.

The crew was enthusiastic, but the captain, Arkansas' Democratic Senator Fulbright, was doubtful.

Fulbright was overruled by the six other members of his banking subcommittee yesterday. He bowed to their desire to keep searching for evidence of questionable practices in government agencies. Fulbright had announced earlier the inquiry would wind up as scheduled March 31 because he thought an extension would serve only political ends.

The subcommittee has changed that. While House Aide Donald Dawson is a key figure in an influence clique it said has exerted pressures of multi-million dollar loans by the RFC.

In yielding to opinion on his committee, Fulbright reiterated that he personally believes the subcommittee already has "served its purpose" and has proved the charges were accurate — not asinine as President Truman said.

Subcommittee members said Fulbright agreed to continue the RFC study without forcing a vote on the issue — because he clearly could not have won.

Into what new lanes of inquiry the subcommittee will turn remained unanswered. It is a permanent subcommittee created to deal only with RFC affairs, but is now on a special assignment from the full senate banking committee to conduct this inquiry along with other work. Although his assignment and the appropriation to finance it, are due to expire on April 30, Fulbright announced the inquiry will run on "for an indefinite period."

He said Senator Murray (D-Mont.), who has been named in the inquiry, has asked and been promised a chance to testify in the extended hearings. Former Rep. Joseph E. Casey (D-Mass.), named as a member of the so-called clique, will be called back. But Fulbright stayed mum on the subject of planned new lines of inquiry, and so did his fellow members.

FORD WINS AGAIN!

V-8 TAKES FIRST PLACE IN CLASS "A" 1951 MOBILGAS ECONOMY RUN

Both Ford V-8 and SIX
Deliver more than 25.9 miles per gallon

Gruelling 840-mile test
proves Ford Economy

Again this year . . . it's high honors for Ford! In the most important economy trial for American stock model cars . . . the famous annual Mobilgas Economy Run . . . a Ford 100-h.p. V-8 equipped with Overdrive took first place competing against all cars in its price class, making 54.587 ton-miles per gallon* and 25.994 miles per gallon. And its companion in quality, the new Ford SIX with Overdrive, was right up there with the winner. In fact, both cars averaged better than 25.9 miles per gallon.

Traditional Ford economy, for the second straight year, has been proved in open competition. Proved on the tough 840-mile grind from Los Angeles to the Grand Canyon . . . a course that included city traffic, below-sea-level desert heat and 7,000-foot mountain passes. Ford's Automatic Mileage Maker, standard equipment on all Ford V-8's and SIXES, contributed to this great achievement by squeezing the last mile out of every drop of gasoline.

Why not "Test Drive" the new Ford at your neighborhood Ford Dealer's? There's no better way to be convinced that "You can pay more but you can't buy better!"

*The AAA Contest Board determines the winner by a "ton-mile per gallon" formula to insure equal chance for all cars in each class regardless of size and weight. Ton-miles per gallon equals the car weight (including passengers) in tons, multiplied by number of miles traveled, divided by number of gallons of gasoline consumed.
